Feast of St. Isidore the Farmer, May 15

Isidore was born to very poor yet very pious Catholic parents in 1060 in Madrid, Spain. His parents were unable to support him when he was a youth and sent him to work for a wealthy landowner, John de Vergas. (He ended up working for him for the rest of his life.)

He married a very religious woman named Maria Torribia (also known as Maria de la Cabeza). She, like Isidore became a saint. They had one son who died unexpectedly as a child.

Isidore attended Mass every morning, but often reported to work late. Late, though he was, his plowing was nevertheless accomplished by angels that resulted in 3 times more productivity. His coworkers and his boss witnessed such miraculous events and accorded Isidore with great respect.

Isidore was a master in combining work and prayer, in joining prayer to work. People said of him that "in life his hand was ever on the plow, his heart ever blessed with the thought of God. Throughout the day, this humble farmer would commend his work to God. Isidore's agricultural labors mirrored his spiritual cultivation of holiness. He took the prophet Hosea's words to heart: "Sow for yourselves righteousness, reap the fruit of steadfast love." (Hos. 10:12). Isidore sowed works of mercy and reaped a harvest of joy through his service to God and neighbor.

St. Isidore loved the poor and loved the animals. The miracle of the multiplication of food occurred when Isidore fed a flock of starving birds and on another time when he shared his food with a large group of beggars.

Isidore died on May 15, 1120, at 60 years of age and was canonized in 1622. St. Isidore is known as the patron of farmers, peasants, day laborers, and rural communities.
